San Diego Chargers: The Game Plan

Over the next few months, the San Diego Chargers will be focused on the numbers—and an aging power plant on the Chula Vista bayfront.

In a recent appearance before the City Council, Chargers spokesperson Mark Fabiani announced the team will take time out from its high profile stadium search in Chula Vista to determine if there's a way to privately pay for a new billion dollar facility. While the Chargers are exploring finances with a team of consultants, they will also be taking a long, hard look at the South Bay Power Plant, which sits on one of two potential stadium sites in the city.

Although city leaders are demanding that the hulking plant be decommissioned and demolished by 2010, the California Independent System Operator (ISO), which controls the power grid for much of the state, has given the South Bay plant a "must run" designation. That means the plant will continue to operate until replacement power production can be identified.

The Chargers have been sitting on the sidelines, witnessing the struggle over the future of the power plant. Fabiani told city leaders that, over the next several months, the organization must determine if there is a reliable timetable for decommissioning the plant.

In a series of public meetings, the Chargers have been gauging public opinion about the possibility of locating a stadium in Chula Vista. Two potential sites are under consideration —the bayfront site in the west, and acres of privately owned land in the east.

During his brief presentation to Council, Fabiani noted the Chargers organization was encouraged by the level of interest shown by Chula Vistans. "The vast majority of people we met were open-minded," he noted.

Can the Chargers privately finance a stadium? And when will California ISO pull the plug on the power plant? The Chargers aren't expected back before the City Council until they have their answers.

Raising the Profile of Cold Cases

Visit the Chula Vista Police Department online to help solve old murder cases.

CVPD's Cold Case Unit is producing videos and will soon post them on the City's website to raise the profile of unsolved homicides. Investigators are hoping the videos outlining past cases will generate leads that will allow them to close the book on some of the City's worst violent crimes. They hope to jog the memories of witnesses, family members, neighbors and others who may have valuable information to share.

CVPD investigators are
of closure.

Just recently, they solved the murder of 18-year old Anita Marie Carrier (pictured here), who was stabbed to death 31 years ago. The victim walked into the Main Gate bar in Chula Vista just before closing time and left with a man. The next morning, her body was discovered on the grounds of an apartment complex. Carrier had been stabbed 28 times.

was the original crime scene technician on the case. His efforts in collecting and preserving the evidence played a major role in finding Carrier's killer.

Anyone who wants to contact the Cold Case team about unsolved homicides can call (619) 409-5801 or fill out a tip sheet that will be posted online.

For more than three decades, detectives believed career criminal Charles Edward Manley, also known as Charles Edward Beard, was the murderer—but they couldn't prove it beyond a reasonable doubt.

Just recently, the Cold Case Unit asked the Sheriff's Crime Lab to take a fresh look at the DNA evidence, including fingernail clippings from the victim. The DNA results linked Manley to the murder—years after he died in a Nevada prison. The case of Anita Carrier has been "cleared."

A key player in the investigation is recently retired CVPD Crime Lab Manager Bill Johnson, who

High Tech High Countdown

Next fall, High Tech High Chula Vista, the first school of its kind in the South Bay, moves into a brand new facility on the University Park and Research Center campus.

The charter school, which will occupy an eight-acre site at the corner of Hunte Parkway and Discovery Falls Drive in eastern Chula Vista, is now accepting applications from students for the 2008-2009 school year. Only ninth and tenth grade students can apply.

Last year, when the permanent facility was still under construction, the charter school opened with 150 ninth grade students in temporary quarters on the Mater Dei Catholic High School campus. Each year, High Tech High Chula Vista will expand to include another grade. Eventually, a companion school for younger students—K through 8 grades—will open on a three-acre site nearby.

High Tech High is accepting applications for the new school year. Applications are due March 7, 2008.

Every year, new students are selected using a computerized lottery system designed to capture a student population that reflects the demographics of the community. Applications for the new school year are due by March 7.

High Tech High Chula Vista offers students a college preparatory curriculum that highlights environmental studies, sustainability, civic engagement, and student leadership. The Chula Vista campus is a tuition-free, public charter school affiliated with the nationally recognized network of High Tech High schools lauded for their innovative design principles and rigorous project-based learning.

High Tech High began in 2000 as a single charter high school launched by a coalition of San Diego business leaders and educators who were concerned about the region's shortage of qualified high-tech workers. It evolved into a nationally recognized school development organization committed to showing how education can be redesigned to ensure that all students graduate well prepared for college, work and citizenship.

Applications for fall enrollment are available online at www.hightechhigh.org/schools/HTHCV/. All families applying to the Chula Vista location are required to attend one of four parent information meetings. Current scheduled meetings are:

BMX Arrives in Chula Vista

USA Cycling has set its sights on Chula Vista as a training ground for its newest Olympic Sport, BMX Super Cross. The U.S. Olympic Training Center in Chula Vista has the only permanent BMX training course in the country. The course, which opened January 21, gives riders like Donny Robinson, Mike Day and Jill Kintner a tremendous advantage as they prepare for the upcoming BMX Olympic debut in Beijing, China.

BMX, an acronym for Bicycle Motocross, is an action-packed form of cycling that takes athletes down a steep start ramp, over jumps and around sharp turns in a race for the finish line. Eight athletes go head-to-head in each race. BMX races are sprints, that showcase an athlete's speed, agility and power.

Chula Vista's course was built by Tom Ritzenthaler, an avid BMX rider who designed the sport's venue in Beijing.

"The new course is very challenging and very technical. It's very similar to what you'll see in Beijing, which is huge for our athletes," Ritzenthaler said. "They'll be training and competing on a sophisticated, state-of-the-art course; and because of the similarities between the two venues, our athletes will be very comfortable with the kind of obstacles they encounter in the Olympic Games. This course at the training center has an eight-meter start ramp—there are no other permanent courses with a start ramp that high in the United States."

US Cycling is so pleased with the local course that it's named Chula Vista as the site for the Olympic Trials for Men's BMX, an event scheduled to take place sometime in June. NBC will be televising the trials.

"It's an honor to have our facility designated as the only permanent training location for BMX in the Americas," said Tracy Lamb, the center's new director. "We pledge to keep our training center on the cutting edge of competition for our nation's athletes."

The BMX program has another strong local connection. Program director Mike King grew up in Chula Vista and attended Montgomery Junior High and Bonita High schools. In those earlier days, King was a dedicated BMX athlete who undoubtedly spent more than a few days "shredding the trails" of Chula Vista.

Athletes to Watch

Meet some of the training center's Olympic hopefuls in the next few editions of CV Connect.

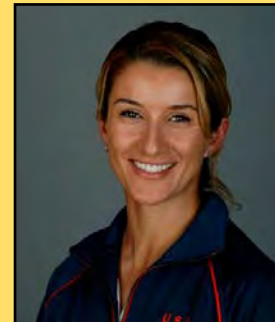

The Olympic Archery Team will be selected during the U.S. Archery Olympic Trials here in Chula Vista in April.

Brady Ellison

Archery

Just 19 years old, Ellison was a member of the Gold-Medal winning team at the 2007 Pan American Games in Rio de Janeiro and has spent the past year ranked in the top-three for U.S. men.

Khatuna Lorig

Archery

An experienced Archer with three Olympic Games and an Olympic Bronze Medal under her belt, Lorig hopes to make her fourth Olympic Team in 2008.

The Latest at the Library

Wine Tasting Event Supports Library

Enjoy an evening of wine, hors d'oeuvres and heirloom discovery February 9, as the Chula Vista Library Foundation (CVLF) hosts a special event to benefit the City's three library branches. From 5-8 p.m., the foundation will host "Amore del Vino en Letteratura" (Love of Wine and a Love of Literature) at the Monteville Recreation Center, located at 840 Duncan Ranch Road.

The CVLF is a non-profit organization that supports the programs and services of the Chula Vista Public Library. "This is our first fundraising event, and we're planning on making it a memorable evening," said Roderick Reinhart, the Foundation's Secretary. "Sip some wine and nibble on hors d'oeuvres while helping your local library. Don't forget to bring along a family heirloom for a free evaluation by appraisers who will be sharing their expertise with us—specifically for this event."

Wine-tasting tickets are $35 per person. Tickets can be purchased at the three library branches or online at www.cvplfoundation.org.

February Film Festival

Romance will be in the air the month of February as the library headlines four great movies in the "Romance in Black America Film Festival" at the Chula Vista Public Library. The films will be shown on Wednesday nights-- Feb. 6, 13, 20 and 27-- starting at 5:30 p.m. in the Civic Center Branch auditorium. The Civic Center Branch is located at 365 F St.

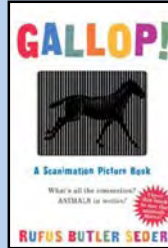

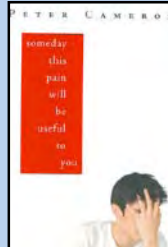

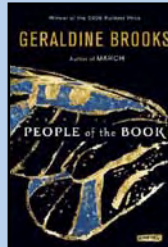

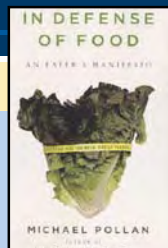

Anyone interested in knowing more about the festival and the film titles is encouraged to visit one of the branches to get a flyer or call the Civic Center Branch at (619) 691-5069.

Get Active...and Have Fun!

Learn Archery from an Olympian

Having a U.S. Olympic Training Center as a neighbor has its advantages. Over the past 12 years, the training center and the City's Recreation Department have forged a close working relationship. That's the reason Tara Robey, a two-time national archery champion and winner of five medals, is teaching archery classes and camps for the City of Chula Vista.

Robey has competed with the U.S. Olympic Archery Team. Most recently, she was the director of a Junior Olympic Archery Development tournament in Chula Vista. Eight of her students participated in the tournament and, competing against other young people across the country, won several medals. In fact, our recreation department was the only city agency at the National Tournament.

A teen dance for middle and high school students starts at 8 p.m. and ends at 11 p.m. A $3 cover charge picks up the cost of a live DJ playing Hip-Hop, Top 40s and slow jams.

Clapper Rail Release

Staff and volunteers at the Chula Vista Nature Center are getting ready for one of the most intense and rewarding times of the year as they prepare for the annual Light-footed Clapper Rail hatching season.

Rails are an endangered species. The birds, native to Southern California, thrived here until their coastal wetland habitat began to disappear decades ago. Scientists warned that, without human intervention, the species was destined to become extinct.

The Nature Center and several of its partners including the San Diego Wild Animal Park, SeaWorld, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, stepped in to save the rails with an ambitious captive breeding program.

Since the breeding program began in 2001, 171 birds have been reared and released into the region's wetlands--from Santa Barbara to the Mexican border.

This video shows the Nature Center's most recent Light-footed Clapper Rail release in San Diego County.

Technology Grant

Brings easier online access

Thanks to a $10,000 technology grant from the AT&T Foundation, the Chula Vista Nature Center will be easier to access—online. The grant provides funding for much-needed web upgrades that will allow the center to improve its connection to customers and expand the level of service to everyone who has an interest in preserving the region's wetlands and native wildlife. When the upgrades are completed a few months from now, online visitors will be able to:

- Purchase educational materials
- Purchase memberships
- Donate to the Nature Center Foundation

In addition, the grant lays the groundwork for installation of a second webcam, which will feature the center's magnificent pair of Golden eagles—permanent residents of the Eagle Mesa exhibit.

Located on the Sweetwater Marsh National Wildlife Refuge along San Diego Bay, the Chula Vista Nature Center exhibits plants and animals native to local marsh and wetland habitats.

"This grant gives us the opportunity to reach out to a larger and more diverse audience," noted Nature Center director Dan Beintema. "The support of the AT&T Foundation will ensure that we continue to provide environmental conservation education to more people than ever before--from visitors and students to members, volunteers, and donors."

AT&T Excelsior grants support worthy nonprofit organizations such as the Chula Vista Nature Center by helping them introduce new technologies that ultimately result in improved or increased programs for the populations they serve. The AT&T Foundation is the corporate philanthropy organization of AT&T, Inc.

The Brew House at EastLake

How many brew pubs boast a dessert chef?

That's just one of the extras that makes the Brew House at EastLake stand out from other brew pubs in the region.

Chula Vista's first micro brewery, which opened just before the new year in the EastLake Design District, has already become a popular neighborhood stop. With its hand-crafted brews and upscale pub fare, this newcomer is an original that caters to customers with a taste for quality and distinction.

Where else will you find labels on tap like Bonita Blond, Wolf Canyon Wheat, Rolling Hills Irish Red and Otay Lakes Oatmeal Stout?

Owners Doug Chase and Jim Shirey—two South Bay entrepreneurs—started brewing beer as a hobby twelve years ago at home in EastLake. While they perfected their recipes and techniques, the two men dreamed of opening a unique, independent brew pub. After Shirey sold his car auction business, and Chase's high tech employer moved its operations overseas, the friends got down to business. They selected a location, hired a chef and a restaurant consultant, and started planning the menu and the design of their 7,400 square-foot restaurant.

"We wanted a clean, simple, elegant design," noted Chase, an engineer, who's proud of the brew pub's natural look of wood paneling and brick accents.

Huge custom made stainless steel fermenting tanks filled with beer, line the walls of the bar lounge. Although the brew pub isn't a bona fide sports bar, fans can track their favorite teams and athletes on one of the 14 overhead plasma TVs. Two private rooms, equipped with plasmas, DVD players, and PowerPoint ready technology, are available for special events or business meetings. A small arcade caters to kids and their computer games; and a large outdoor patio overlooks a relaxing fountain and features two fire pits.

"Customers tell us they've been waiting for our Brew House to open," said Chase. "The comment we hear over and over again is—this is what EastLake needs."

Chase and Shirey, who also have a brewery in southwestern Chula Vista, are just as proud of the food they serve as the beer they brew. They've installed a 750 degree pizza oven and a smoker that turns out delicious ribs, tri tip and chicken. Everything from sauces and crab cakes to desserts and five onion stout soup are made from scratch. For non-beer drinkers, the Brew House at EastLake offers a full bar, draft root beer, a boutique wine list, "Brew Tinis," and specialty cocktails like the Padre Pomegranate Mojito and the Chula Cheese Cake Martini.

Eat in, or order out.

Home delivery will be coming soon.

Visit www.BrewHouseEastLake.com to see the menu for yourself.

An Energy Check-up for Your Home

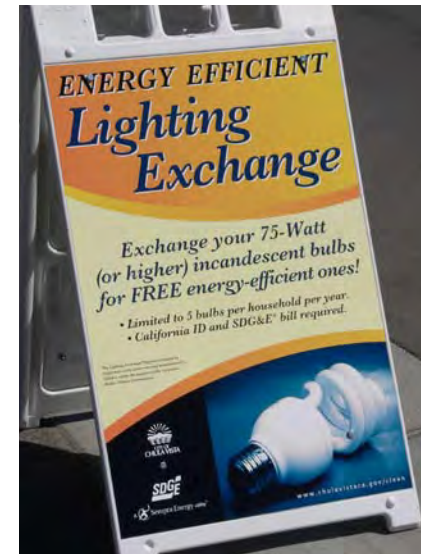

If winter energy bills are getting you down, it may be time for a home energy check-up courtesy of the City of Chula Vista-SDG&E Energy Efficiency Partnership. Our Energy Specialists will come to your home to answer all your questions, and will exchange up to five of your old light bulbs for energy-saving Compact Fluorescent Bulbs for free! Call the Chula Vista Department of Conservation and Environmental Services for an assessment today at (619) 409-3893.

Go Green Bonanza!

Get everything you need to Go Green and Clean on Saturday, February 23 at the Civic Center Branch Library (365 F Street) from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Help keep toxic mercury out of our bay and ocean by exchanging your old mercury thermometer for a new, mercury-free digital thermometer (stock is limited, first come first serve). Lower your energy bills and help slow global warming by exchanging up to five of your old incandescent light bulbs for new, energy saving compact fluorescent light bulbs (limit five bulbs per household per year).

For more information on the thermometer exchange, call (619) 691-5122; for the light bulb exchange, call (619) 409-3893.

Save Energy! Get Free Shade Trees!

Time is running out for an unbeatable offer. Until March 15, Chula Vista homeowners can get up to ten free trees through the South Bay Shade program! Trees provide shade that reduces energy costs, improves local air and water quality, and increases property values. The program offers more than 20 tree varieties ranging from 10 to 15-gallons in size.

For more information, log onto www.energycenter.org. The South Bay Shade program is administered by the California Center for Sustainable Energy and funded through The Home Depot Foundation.

R&R Reduce and Recycle

Reducing waste and recycling more saves natural resources, saves energy, reduces the production of greenhouse gases and can save you money. To help you get started:

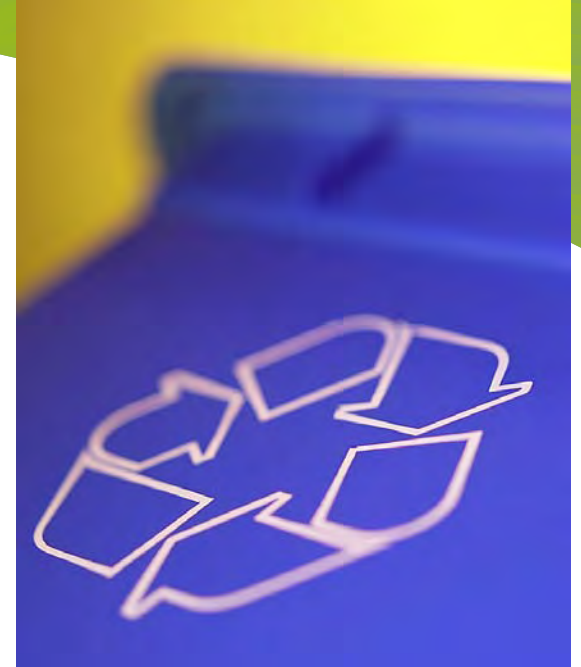

- Reduce your packaging: Buy bulk or concentrated products when you can
- Reduce toxicity: Recycle your batteries and use rechargeable or reduced mercury batteries.
- Select reusable products: Sturdy, washable utensils, tableware, cloth napkins, and cleaning cloths can be used many times.
- Use durable products: Choose furniture, sports equipment, toys and tools that will stand the test of time.
- Reuse products: Reuse newspaper, boxes, "peanuts" and bubble wrap to ship packages.
- Buy products made from recycled material: Many bottles, cans, cereal boxes, containers, paper products, greeting cards and cardboard cartons are made from recycled materials. Look for the words "Recycled Content".

If you can reduce the amount of waste you generate at your home or office, you can reduce the amount of trash service you need, saving you money.

Residents have the ability to choose from three different size trash carts for weekly trash service (32, 64 and 96 gallons). Do you have the right size trash cart for you? Call Allied Waste to discuss your options (619) 421-9400.

Business owners/managers can call one of the City's Recycling Specialists to receive a free waste audit and service evaluation of your specific operation. Just call (619) 397-6360 or (619) 397-6222 to set an appointment.
